Press Release – for immediate release

One of the UK's most notable psychological therapists and crime commentators, Emma Kenny is here to give us an education in what creates a serial killer, and where they may be hiding in plain sight...

Kenny takes us on a journey, looking at what ingredients lead to body counts like those of Ted Bundy or Jeffrey Dahmer, and could anything have prevented their potential being activated? This live talk is a collision of pop culture intrigue and cold, hard facts, with a dash of gallows humour which takes the difficult material away from being too tough to handle. Learn to better understand the psychology of a murderous mind here in Worthing on Wednesday 24 November, 7:30pm.

The show will be centered on Kenny's research and the central facts of a variety of cases, but will also focus on the idea that anyone we know could have the potential to be a serial killer and what can we do to recognise the signs. In conversation with The Courier, she says 'serial killers live amongst us, move between us, are even married to us, and only by studying their behaviour can we adapt ours to give us a fighting chance of survival should they sliver into our lives.'

While she specialises in victimology, Kenny is mostly known in the media for presenting crime shows including Britain's Darkest Taboos, Lady Killers, and The Killer in My Family. Indeed, she has presented over 70 crime shows analysing cases both in the UK and the States, exploring why some people can be born into seemingly 'normal' environments yet still choose a murderous path.

Utilising her honed skills as a psychotherapist, Kenny provides expert opinion on many radio stations, including BBC Radio, Heart and Magic, and regularly contributes to publications including Grazia and Cosmopolitan. She is also the founder of Appy - a health and wellbeing social media app.

Kenny worked rehabilitating young offenders for over a decade and found that her interest in true crime is not led by gratuitous voyeurism, rather a natural empathy. She says, 'people who love true crime tend to have higher empathy levels - this real connection with wanting to understand what it is that makes another human being do something that to them is just beyond reprehensible.' It is for this reason she wasn't surprised that 70% of her audience are women who love true crime.

She goes on to say, 'it's almost like trying to understand the road map of possible people that they'll never be able to relate to because they are humans with empathy and compassion.'
